APPOMATTOX ROADS

The people of Appomattox are tired of mud roads and seem to be in earnest about some improvement now.

In the supplement of this paper will be found a map of all roads in the county showing plainly the proposed roads set down for improvement.

We have been talking good roads for many years, but no definite plan has been presented until now.

The people are urged to look the plan over and digest it and come to the meeting called for March 22, prepared to vote for this plan, or some better plan if you have one.

The plan shown presents a comprehensive road system for the entire county, using the State Highway as the main highway of the county and building these prop sed feeders out from each town in the county.

There is some sentiment and a petition for the State Highway to be diverted from the original route adopted—Prospect, Pamplin, Evergreen and Appomattox to a route leading north from Prospect across Appomattox river thence up Burnett's road via Rose Bower, Vera and north of Appomattox on to Sprout Spring.

This change if made would destroy the road system of Appomattox county, as there would be no feeders from Evergreen or Pamplin on the High way, while under the plan shown by the map good roads are to be built out on both sides of these towns from the State Highway, which gives every section of the county a good road to market. To change the plan would entirely isolate all of that section of the county south of the Appomattox river, besides the distance from Prospect to Appomattox would be increased and thousands of dollars of State and Federal money added to the cost of the road. It is our opinion that where the proposed plan is digested that the gentlemen who ask for the State road north of the River will see the selfishness and harm in the general road system of the county and will be satisfied if the proposed improved road to be built on from each R. R. station, to its respective communities of the county.

We would sound a note of warning to those who are earnestly endeavoring to improve road conditions in the county not to let the location of the State Highway hold us back.

There is now ready for road improvement in this State many millions of dollars in the Federal and State treasuries and if Appomattox would share in the distribution of this fund, let us get together and adopt some definite plan and petition the County to let the vote on a bond issue to raise our part of the money.

We will probably never have a better chance to build our roads than now. Our bonds can be sold at a low rate of interest, the State has a fund ready for us to match.

Will you do it now or put it off for another fifty years?

Let's get together on a definite plan and start the work this year We can do it. Will you help start the good road from your community to town?

To keep up our schools, churches and progress, we MUST have better roads.

To keep our boys on the farm we must have these home advantages.

Appomattox must not fail above now for better conditions and a definite road plan.

Notice

After you have read this issue please preserve it, as you will need it in meeting the arguments of any who oppose the Good Roads movement. Cut out the coupon and sign and return to us if you favor this definite plan of roads.

Tax Payer

MR. EDITOR:

The article in your last issue signed "Taxpayer" has interested me. May I say one or two things?

First. Evidently the improved roads near Appomattox are of recognized worth, because they have been the subject much discussed in the last few years.

Now then. Road building has to start somewhere. We won't discuss now why they were first built at Appomattox; that is past history and won't help to get better roads.

But as one of those who has been in most of the recent meetings in which roads were discussed, may I say to Mr. Taxpayer that those of us who are enjoying most now the few miles of good roads are so well paid that we are leading our time, our influence, and will go the limit with money to help put this same system into every section of the county. The investment now on foot is big enough and broad enough to do this very thing.

Study the map in this issue of the paper and see if I am giving you the facts. But remember it costs to build roads, and when the time comes to vote on a bond issue or some other method to raise the money to build a road in front of your home, see to it, Mr. Tax payer, that you vote for it, or you may be heard from again some day when you are in a narrow muddy place in your road.

Roosters for good roads are what you ought to be; knocking, the things do not always go right, won't get us any where.

When you find an official of this county false to his trust vote him down, that's your privilege. But when we want now is your vote for good roads.

A. H. HARWOOD.

Good Roads Association

A meeting of the executive committee of the Virginia Good Roads Association will be held in Richmond Tuesday for the purpose of considering ways and means of providing funds with which the State may meet the competitive federal highways being made by the federal government, and seems the portion Virginia will be entitled to after having complied with the conditions. It is hoped that this committee will ask Governor Davis to call a special session of the legislature to act on the matter, thus failing in line with several other organizations which have already passed resolutions to the same effect, among these latter being the general committee of the good roads and trans portation bodies of the Peoples Congress of Commerce and representatives of the Automobile Club of this city. Mr. O. L. McGraw, who is a member of the Lynchburg Automobile Club, is also a member of the executive committee of the Virginia Good Roads Association and will attend the meeting. Sunday's News.

Order Lime and Fertilizers at Once

There appears to be a disposition on the part of farmers, for some reason or another, to delay ordering fertilizers and lime. The Bureau of Soils of the United States Department of Agriculture calls attention to the fact that, unless lime is ordered early, farmers may have much difficulty in securing their requirements both because of the fact that lime plants are unable to store up supplies and because of the strain on transportation.

Somewhat the same situation exists as to fertilizers. The regional director of railways in the Southeastern district recently called attention to the fact that fertilizer movements are greatly delayed. Ordinarily, 40 per cent of the whole fertilizer tonnage, he says, has been shipped by February 10, but this year less than 15 per cent had moved by that date. The normal yearly movement is about 600,000 carloads and, at the date of the director's appeal, it was 50,000 cars short of what it should have been. "It is easy," he continues, "for you to see what a fear should exist that at the last moment can not be moved to the satisfaction of our patrons, and complaints will follow."

It is apparent, therefore, that delay in ordering either fertili zer or lime may have serious results.

On the North Side

We are glad to hear that Master Dennis Bell, who is in a Lynchburg hospital, is getting on nicely.

Mr. John Mcginnis, who has been in France since last June, arrived home last Sunday, after landing safely in Liverpool for a few days How glad we are to see our soldier boys return. And our sympathy goes out to the mothers of those boys who will never return. May God comfort them as He alone can. I wonder how the slacker cases the brave boys as they return Some will say, "well, I was not called", but why work? you call? But, suppose we forgot him, as he is all over. Is all over here, but when the Great Book is opened at the last day I am afraid it will be recorded there.

The winter has been exceedingly cold, yet one of our second cousins are buying feed and corn. This remin s me of some I tiers I read in a Missouri paper; the farmers were complaining of the fast time, some of them called it fast time. I hope we are not to have the ex rience of daylight this time, though I really saw no difference, as the sun rose and set as it has done since time began. I once heard a very smart man say that it was only for the city people, anyway.

But we will have the daylight saving plan again this year. On 30th March all clocks are to be turned back one hour.—Ed.]

What T. Roosevelt Thought of the Teacher's Task

You teachers—and it is a mere truism to say this—you teachers make the whole world your debtor; and of you it can be said as it can be said of no other profession save the profession of the ministers of the gospel themselves, if you teachers did not do your work well, this Republic would not outlast the span of a generation.

Moreover, as an incident to your avowed work, you render some well nigh unbelievable services to the country. For instance, you render to this Republic the prime, the vital service of amalgamating into one homogeneous body the children of those who are born here and of those who come here from so many different lands abroad. You furnish a common training and common ideals for the children of all the mixed peoples who are here being fused into one nationality. It is no small degree due to you, and to your efforts, that we of this great American Republic form one people instead of a group of jarring peoples. The children, wherever they have been born, wherever their parents have been born, who are educated in our schools side by side with one another, will inevitably grow no having the sense of and understanding which is entirely indispensable for working the problems that we at present have before us.—Address to National Education Association, Grove, N. J., July 7, 1905.

Call For Mass Meeting

As president of the Appomattox Good Roads Association, I hereby give notice to every citizen of this county that there will be a meeting at Appomattox C. H. on Saturday, March 22, at 1:30 p. m. of this association to discuss and act upon the system of good roads as proposed by the executive committee of the association. A map of this system of roads may be seen in this issue of this paper.

Study it hard; see if it suits you or does have some system and we must carry it to completion. We must be sure we are right before we go ahead, for when we have agreed upon good plan and system let us go ahead and go fast and strong. Let us be able to start to work in every district in the county at the same time. Let us go after the detestable road. In this county like in most after the Kaiser, and we will soon run them off our map.

Discussion of good roads is a good thing, but let us not discuss and argue the res of our lives. Let us act, and act with a purpose and meaning. From now until the 22d let us discuss and argue and think and plan with all our minds, oppose and perhaps put on that day let us decide what we want done and be ready to petition the circuit court to call for an election to let the people vote on the way it shall be done. Some want a hard road, some a dirt road, some are opposed to convict labor, some are not. First let us decide on what roads to build, and then vote on the plan a d method, and let the majority decide it.

So you see, fellow citizens, it is your duty to come to the meeting and speak and vote your mind. Let us make it a rousing good road meeting. I dare say there is not a man in this county opposed to good roads; so come one and help to get them. This same division, of course, has no real authority; but out it will go as the sense of the citizens. Its recommendations ought to have weight.

Remember the day, the hour and the cause.

J. A. BURKE,
President.

Custom Had Origin Long Ago.

The almost universal habit of running aside the head and suppressing the sneeze or cough has an interesting origin. It is derived from human experience. In the middle ages (and probably much earlier), when frequent plagues of various diseases swept over whole populations in Europe, it was suspected and even believed that infection was conveyed by coughing and sneezing. Hence the adoption of the precaution.

ALL REQUIREMENTS OF HERO

Meriwether Lewis, President Jefferson's Secretary, Had Qualifications Demanded in Fiction.

When a writer comes to the fashioning of a hero usually he wants a tall young man—the ladies love that sort. Meriwether Lewis was a tall young man, goodly in inches and in thews. A hero must have courage, or the ladies will not like him. What hero of fact or fiction ever showed more courage than he did? I question if Christopher Columbus ever needed more courage or ever showed more than Meriwether Lewis.

A hero must be a trifle of an elegant also, else the ladies will not like him. Meriwether Lewis was once called "a splendid dandy." He was not only President Thomas Jefferson's business assistant, but his social secretary as well, and arbiter of good form in the early days of Washington.

The ladies like a hero with a past, with a certain air of melancholy about him. No author need imagine these things for Meriwether Lewis—there was mystery and romance in all his life. Dead at thirty-five years of age, he died as he had lived, surrounded still with a very halo of mystery, developed in a splendid reticence which shielded him against all the world. That mystery exists even today. The full story of his life has never been told, and may never be told. In short, he was a hero, with all the elements of heroism. Of him certainly it might be written that he lived always a gentleman unafraid. Officer, gentleman, soldier, statesman, born leader and born lover—why imagine heroes when such as this exist!—Emerson Hough in Southern Woman's Magazine.

FIJIAN RACE IS DYING OUT

South Sea Islanders No Longer Savages and Cannibal But Humorous, Good-Natured Loafers.

The Fiji islands abound in reputation. To our grandparents they were the last word in barbarism, a simile for anything at once remote and terrible, a place where missionaries got stewed—by the cannibals—and clothes were worn not at all.

The general impression of the South Sea Islands as a wild and degenerate part of the world was softened and illumined by the writings of Mark Twain about Hawaii and by Robert Louis Stevenson's essays from Samoa. But no one wrote anything important about the Fijians, and that is why the islands and people today are so very different from what you would expect to find them.

The Fijians are not only no longer savages and cannibals, but they are fast disappearing altogether. Hindus, Englishmen and Samoans are the toilers of the islands. The fierce Solomon Islander is seen here, too, but is more apt to be hunting your laundry than your head. The Fijian, still distinguished by the frizzled aureole of his hair and the scantiness of his attire, is a humorous, good-natured loafer. His native land is rapidly being taken away from him by more industrious peoples, and his race is dying out; but these things worry him not at all. He lives by the fish of his rivers and the wild fruit of the jungle, and by the skill of his wife in pottery and other handicrafts. He has given up cannibalism in deference to popular opinion, it is true, but in other ways he still lives his life much as he pleases, which is more than most of us ever achieve.

Navel Orange From Bahia.

It was from a plantation near Bahia, so far as can be determined, that the budded trees were obtained through which the navel orange wood was introduced into the United States. Several were shipped to the United States department of agriculture. Trees were grown in the department greenhouses, and others propagated from them were distributed to California and Florida. The variety proved to be unsuited to Florida conditions, but in California it is very productive and highly valued. Almost the entire present planting of the variety in that state, according to a writer in the Scientific American, can be traced directly back to two of the trees sent there by the department of agriculture in 1870.

Nation's Defense.

The wealth of a nation must be defended as well as constructed. . . . Even if the days of absolute conquest are past, there are yet a thousand liabilities to violent encroachment on the honor and rights of a people which they cannot be passive under without sacrificing a national spirit and willingness dissolving the bonds of government itself. But where lies the strength of a nation's defense? In such things as money purchases—ships, fortifications and magazines of war? No. The real public bulwarks of a nation are . . . public love, wisdom, and high command, attachment to home and bravery.—Horace Bushnell.

Night Owls Are Safe.

A celebrated scientist, who has made a lifelong study of different forms of bacteria, recently made the interesting announcement that there are more microbes in the air at nine o'clock in the morning and at nine o'clock at night than during any other periods of the day. He says that he has also discovered that the percentage of microbes in the atmosphere is less at three o'clock in the morning and at three o'clock in the afternoon than at any other times.
